Fast-Track Private Pilot
Licence Info Pack

PILOTPATH

The Private Pilot Licence (PPL) is the first step in any modular pilot's journey and its completion is based on 2 key requirements being practical and theoretical. When training in Ireland/UK, the practical side of training can become a longer and more drawn out process due to the unpredictable nature of the regions weather. While this certainly suits many students who have hectic work or family commitments, others are more time sensitive and want to fast-track this stage of training. For this, we have a fantastic full-time Private Pilot Licence course in beautiful sunny Southwest Florida.

GROUND TRAINING

- Before the end of the course, you will have to demonstrate a sufficient level of theoretical knowledge at an FAA approved testing center in the form of a written exam.
- The exam consists of 9 subjects (basic aerodynamics, aircraft systems, flight instruments, regulations, procedures and airport operations, weather, weather service, aircraft performance, enroute flight, navigation, communication procedures).
- To pass the PPL(A) theoretical examination you need to achieve a score of at least 70%. This must be done before the flight test.

Once all training is complete and you have passed your skills test, you will be issued with a full FAA private pilot licence. This will enable you to move forward to stages 2 & 3 of modular commercial flight training without the need for conversion to CAA or EASA. For students who are gaining a PPL for leisure and have no intention of moving on to commercial training, a brief CAA or EASA conversion package will be needed on your return home to enable flying in the UK/Europe. Your Pilot Path DEM will arrange this for you and offer full support throughout the process.
